

ABSTRACT

Disclosed is a media, and an imaging process employing the media, for receiving jetted ink containing imaging dye, comprising a support bearing a predetermined array of three dimensional cells composed of cell walls and having a hydrophilic base, the cross section of the cells parallel to the support being of a size sufficiently small so as to improve the range of color gradations attainable.

82395US1